

You wouldn't want to miss this:

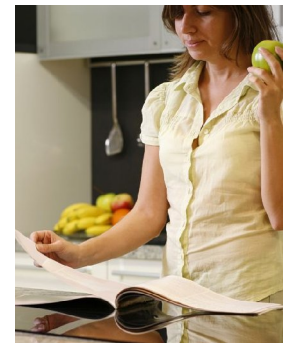

“It’s beautifully put together – it’s the best looking thing I get. For someone like me, working with people who have needs in the community, it’s very encouraging. In fact I thought it was a national initiative – it does look terrific!”

You’d think he was talking about a mail order goody-box, full of intriguing and refreshing images, thought-provoking posters to put on the wall, quick & easy to use brain-gym tools, and a friendly hot line to like-minded people sharing inspiration and practical tips for making the world a better place.

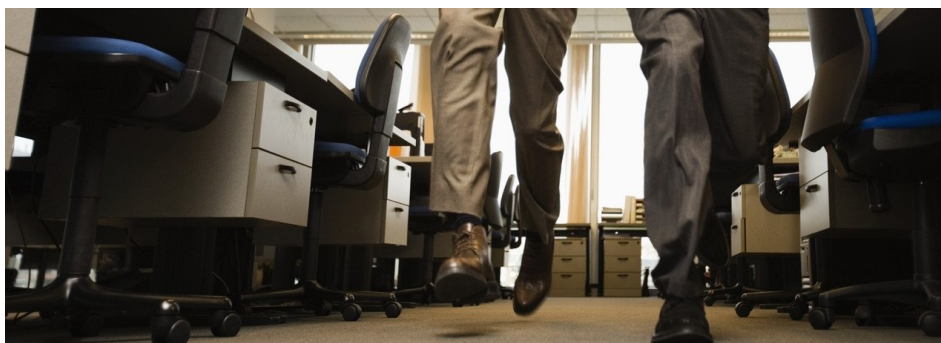

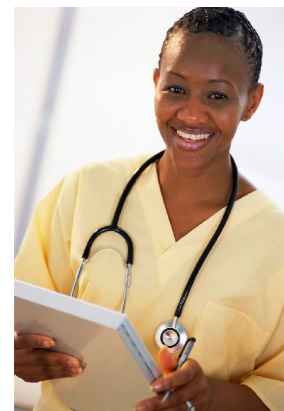

You’d be thinking right. Steve is a nurse and one of a community of hundreds of people – from play workers to policy managers – who receive Open Hearts Open Minds. It’s a free e-bulletin and virtual goody box for people who want to share essential tools, tips and news for making a more inclusive Devon. Sign up, and you too will get the goodies. The e-bulletin brings everything in bite-size and appetizing style to your inbox each month.

It will help you make a difference. Designed for busy people who need to get ideas quick, you’ll scan easily through three short news items for the latest background on how social exclusion affects different vulnerable groups. You’ll keep up to date with the tips from our discussion forums, and print off eye-catching downloads and images to equip you and your team to promote inclusion as a natural part of your work – whatever your job.

There’s nothing quite like it – and we think you’ll work and feel better for it. Have a look at the website www.openheartsoopenminds.org.uk and sign up to receive the e-bulletin now.
