Greenthinking Cornwall Office Opens

Greenthinking is pleased to announce the opening of its Cornwall Office.

Based in Newquay the office will be headed by Andy Heald who is currently studying for an MSc in Energy & Environmental Technology & Economics at the School of Engineering and Mathematical Sciences, City University, London.

In addition to a BA Hons from Liverpool University and a Financial Securities Institute Diploma Andy worked in Washington DC for the Times Mirror Organization followed by 13 years working in finance in the City of London.

Now a resident of Newquay, Andy has a passion for not only harvesting wind energy to produce electricity but also for fun and sport! He has recently completed a Surf, Science and Technology FDSC at Cornwall College, Newquay, and is 'tied to the wind' as a kitesurf instructor for Atlantic Riders, Watergate Bay.

Andy says: 'I am really looking forward to working with everyone at Greenthinking, and aiding the people of Cornwall to discover everything that is possible with renewable energy and environmental management. It is a very exciting and demanding time to be working in this field, in one of the country's best suited counties for most forms of renewable energy'.

Laurence Smith, Greenthinking Partner, says: 'we are very excited about working with Andy, he clearly has a passion for helping people to understand renewable energy systems and the cost and environmental benefits associated with them. Andy will be able to provide a local and reliable service in Cornwall'.

Greenthinking is an independent and ethical business providing environmental advice and renewable energy products including Wind Turbines, Biomass Systems, and Solar Systems for Homes, Businesses, Farms, Local Authorities, Architects, Schools and Colleges in South West England.

Andy gets to grips with an Evance Iskra R9000 Wind Turbine at the Okehampton & District Agricultural Show
